

The properly educated person, called a

Renaissance man, collected art, wrote poetry, enjoyed painting and sculpting, discussed philosophy, and spoke several languages.